South Korea Begins Annual Military Drills near Disputed Islands

South Korea has begun its military exercises near the Dokdo Islands – referred to as the Takashima Islands by Japan. According to Yonhap News, a rumoured meeting on the sidelines of G-7 Cornwall

Summit between the leaders of countries was cancelled just a few days before the exercises started. The meeting is said to have been cancelled after the Japanese Prime Minister Yoshihide Suga objected to these annual drills. Ties between the two countries have severed in the past few months due to their long war-time history and the recent incident of the Tokyo 2020 Olympic Games organizers identifying the Islands as part of Japan on a map showing the route of the Olympic torch relay. South Korea also lodged a complaint with the International Olympic Committee (IOC) on this matter, which was dismissed.

US Lifts Missile Restrictions on South Korea

On May 21, 2021, the US finally lifted the 42-year-old missile development restrictions on South Korea.

The restriction guidelines were first imposed in 1979 when South Korea looked to develop ballistic missiles by acquiring US technology and in return had agreed to limit the range of its missiles to 180 kilometres and a maximum payload of 500 kilograms. Since then, the guidelines were revised four times, as threats from North Korea became more frequent. South Korea can now develop ballistic missiles with a range beyond the Korean Peninsula.

North Korea has criticized this move, calling it a “stark reminder” of United States’ hostile approach toward North Korea.

South Korea to Develop “Iron Dome” Style Defence System

South Korea’s defence procurement agency announced on June 28 that it has approved the plan to build an artillery interception system similar to Israel’s “Iron Dome” to protect its national capital and other key facilities near the Seoul metropolitan area, from the long-range North Korean guns and rocket launchers.

The move can be perceived as a result of North Korea’s military deployment around the demilitarized zone (DMZ). Various reports have stated that there are an estimated 10,000 artillery pieces including rocket launchers, stationed in the north of the DMZ, placing them within 60 miles of Seoul, where half of the country’s population resides.

According to the Defence Acquisition Program Administration, the project is expected to be completed by 2035 at a cost of $2.56 billion.

South Korea Appoints New Air Force Chief

South Korea’s Ministry of National Defence has appointed Lt. Gen. Park In-Ho, a three-star Air Force General, as the new Air Force Chief. Lee Seong-Yong the incumbent, was relieved of his duties on June 10, within a week of his resignation. He resigned after the Ministry of National Defence was severely criticized for the death of a female master sergeant, who, according to her family, took her own life after being sexually abused by her male colleague. This is not a first incident of female abuse and suicide, as South Korean defence forces are often criticized for mistreating female employees and the matter is brushed under the carpet by senior officials.
